Jennings lashes ref as Stones crash

Stones 'cheated'

OBSERVER Thursday, April 21, 1988

Lincoln City 3
Wealdstone 0

WEALDSTONE have launched a furious attack on referee John Morley and opponents Lincoln City, claiming they were 'cheated' out of vital relegation points at Sincil Bank on Saturday.

Referee Morley awarded a penalty that never was; allowed one act of retaliation to snowball into a 15-man brawl; then sent off the wrong Wealdstone player while only booking the original culprit.

It all happened in eight mad minutes before half time. Until then, the 4,159 crowd — the largest Wealdstone have ever played in front of in the Conference — had seen Stones look likely to pick up at least a point.

And Wealdstone are now making an official protest to the league about the incident that started it all off — a very debatable penalty awarded in the 36th minute.

Wealdstone are complaining that referee Morley awarded the spot kick after a disagreement with Paul Bowgett. The centre half alleges he was told by the official: "You'll see what I mean by my next decision."

Within seconds he awarded the penalty against Bowgett for climbing at a corner. Morley appeared to see something nobody else in the whole ground could see and when he blew his whistle most people thought it was for a free kick to Wealdstone. Instead, he pointed to the spot.

Bowgett, the Wealdstone skipper, said: "It just wasn't a penalty. I could not believe the comments he made to me."

And Stones boss Tony Jennings added: "Awarding a penalty for that was an unfair decision. As far as that decision is concerned I would go as far as to say that we were cheated."

Nevertheless, Lincoln's John McGinley stepped up to send your Kevin Foster, making his debut in the Wealdstone goal, the wrong way to open the scoring.

Mick Pittaway was immediately booked for a furious outburst at the referee, pursuing him 40 yards up the pitch in protest.

Right from the kick off there was more misery for Stones when Danny Bailey attempted a back pass from some 35 yards which Phil Brown ran on to and chipped past the advancing Foster.

Then all hell broke loose. Lincoln's former Derby defender Steve Buckley, who had already made three bad challenges on Wealdstone players and got away with all of them, went one step too far with the inspirational, but temperamental, Tony Lynch.

He went in on Lynch from behind and as Lynch not surprisingly retaliated, a brawl developed around him involving about 25 players. Players punched, kicked and backed at each other in a sickening show of violence.

When it was all over, Wealdstone's Samson Olaleye, who was walking behind Lynch and Buckley at the time of the incident and appeared to have nothing to do with it, was sent off.

And while the baying crowd celebrated, Lincoln's Buckley, the instigator of the whole incident, was merely booked.

The normally mild Wealdstone boss Tony Jennings hit out furiously at the referee and at Lincoln

"The referee not only sent off the wrong man, but the over-the-top tackle that started it all off only earned the player a caution. It was a disgraceful tackle."

"I don't condone violence, but I think players have a right to be protected. In situations like that, when the referee doesn't do it, I wouldn't think much of my players if they weren't prepared to stand up for one another."

"I am saddened by the standard of refereeing in this game and in the Conference this season. It makes a mockery of the league's high standards."

"On Saturday, a wrong player was sent off, a false penalty was given. Incidents like that don't help the honesty that an attempt to stave off relegation is built on."

Stones skipper Paul Bowgett was equally scathing. "If the referee was going to send one off, he had to send two or three off. There were worse incidents going on in the brawl. I just think he was away by the crowd."

But from then on, there was no getting back for Stones. They had looked good early on, playing far better football than Lincoln.

But down to ten men, there was little that Stones could do. Lincoln scored a third in the injury time that was added on for the brawl.

Phil Brown received the ball on the left and jinked past two players before shooting neatly home from an angle for an excellent goal.

How far through this match 'report' did you get without bursting into hysterical laughter?
Poor old Wealdstone.

Is this all you get at home?

You thought you were up, you were wrong, you were wrong.

Scarboro, Scarboro, Scarboro.

We'll see you all next year.

Sing when you're winning.

We love you Barnet, we do
